No effect of Sunday nights frost was noticeable on the local produce market yes-terday, the supply of seasonable fruits and vegetables having been still unlimited and prices governed by the ability of the producer to unload his products-in other words, by the demand of the hour. It was thought that some results of the light freeze might be apparent today.

Dressed lamb has been reduced from cents to 6 cents, wholesale, and dressed veal from 81/2 to 5, while the retail price of porterhouse steak has dropped from 25 cents to 25 cents. Pork continues firm at the recently advanced prices. In other lines there were no changes yesterday, and the market was comparatively quiet.

A large arrival of new oranges was on the market.
